DISTANCES.

Measured for Gunners and Artillery-men by a Watch.

Capt. Thouvenin's clever invention, the phototelemeter watch, has been so much improved and modified that it is proposed to use it on war-ships as well as for its original purpose of increasing the efficiency of land artillery. The watch measures distance by the velocity of sound. While it is not easy to judge of distances on land, at sea, only very experienced mariners can estimate with anything approaching accuracy, if it be in any way considerable, the distance separating a vessel from a passing ship, or from a given point of land, and the chances are that in nine cases out of ten he will be wrong in his calculations. All this element of uncertainty is done away with by Capt. Thouvenin's watch. Holding the instrument in his left hand the officer watches for the flash of the enemy's rifle or cannon. Immediately he perceives the light he presses a screw, which resembles that of a keyless watch. When he hears the report he presses the screw a second time. In the interval between the two pressures a needle or hand has moved over an arc on the face of the instrument. This face registers 15 seconds, each second being divided into ten parts. There is, moreover, a small dial on the back, which registers the number of times that the needle has gone around, and marks instantaneously the minutes and quarter minutes. Within the circle of seconds is a smaller one, which indicates the distance covered by the sound through the air. The approximate distance at which the weapon was fired is thus seen at a glance. The same test can be applied to a flash of lightning which precedes a clap of thunder. The phototelemeter watch will enable commanders of batteries to promptly concentrate their fire without having to experiment to find a range, as in times past. It will also be of the utmost value at the coast guard and lifeboat stations in case of vessels in distress firing signal guns for help, and may be the means of saving innumerable lives.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

THE BATTAKS.

A Wonderful People Are the Lettered Cannibals of Sumatra.

Neuman, in 1886, reckoned the population of the entire river basin occupied by the Battaks at 50,000, and Van der Tunk has given us a very good account of their language, and of the Toba dialect in particular. Battak poetry has been treated by Mr. C. A. Ophuijzen in a very entertaining volume, and in it he describes "a curious leaf language used by Battak lovers, in which the name of some leaf or plant is substituted for the word with which it has greatest phonetic similarity."

The Battaks have invented an alphabetic language of their own, and the various shaped letters are sometimes quite intricate and difficult to decipher. Often they write it on narrow strips of tender bamboo about half a foot long, using for the purpose the point of a blunt needle. Their dialects differ but little in degree, and consequently the unification of their language is quite complete. Many of their superstitions, their myths and their beliefs are most interesting, and when one comes to consider their advancement in certain directions it is certainly very remarkable, as Bickmore remarks, that "all of them, beyond the territory under the Dutch government, are cannibals. Those living on this plain also feasted on human flesh until the Dutch conquered them, and obliged them to give up such fiendish custom. The rajah of Sipirok assured the governor of Padang that he had eaten human flesh between 30 and 40 times, and that he had never in all his life tasted anything that he relished half as well. This custom has prevailed among the Battaks from time immemorial."—Dr. R. W. Shufeldt, in Appletons' Popular Science Monthly.

A Bicycle Freak.

The Eiffel tower bicycle is the newest sensation among the wheel-men of Berlin. It is a tandem, and a few weeks ago the strange machine, with one of its riders high in the air, made its appearance on the boulevards of the German city, and it at once became the tandem freak of the continent. The seat of the rider at the top of the tower is reached by a series of steps fixed to the rear frame post of the odd bicycle. The rider on the lofty seat helps in the propulsion of the wheel through a series of pedals, sprocket wheels and a chain leading down to the driver wheel of the bicycle. Strange as it may appear, the wheel can be ridden up and down hill and over the ordinary country roads with as much ease and comfort as the regulation safety.

—To Pacify Her.—"George, I hope you didn't go and make any bets on that horrid election?" "No, dear; I wouldn't be so extravagant. I only let a lot of other fellows make bets with me."—Detroit Free Press.

.....TENTH & MAIN STREETS.....

It is not often that a magazine of the present date contains a contribution from General Andrew Jackson, but it is believed that the account of the Battle of New Orleans printed in the January Century has not before appeared in English. It was written in the form of a personal letter from General Jackson to James Monroe, afterwards President, and was sent to the Emperor Napoleon, whose interest in the Battle of New Orleans is the subject of the Century paper. It will be remembered that on the British side out of six thousand participants 2,117 were killed and wounded, while the Americans lost only six killed and seven wounded. Mr. Roberts says: "When Napoleon learned that the American rifleman had mainly done the deadly work, he immediately desired that all the information touching these riflemen, their weapons, and their method of fighting should be obtained and sent him. 'Such an arm,' he said, 'would surely be as effective in Europe as in America. The French army should have some tirailleurs capable of using it. Surely the gift of marksmanship is not confined to the American alone.'"

Eddie Foy Coming.

Eddie Foy, that excentric comedian, who has made millions laugh throughout the country, is to be here with the American Travesty Company of forty-two people, on tomorrow evening with two car loads of magnificent scenery, in that clever skit of John G. Gilbert's, "Off the Earth." Adele Farrington, so well remembered in "Little Robinson Crusoe," Mary Marbel, whose success in Chicago won her many friends and Louise Archer, Miss Adlyn Estee, Miss Josie Winters, Miss Gertrude Saye, Miss Agnes Saye, Miss Sadie Miner, Miss Rhoda Rivers, Miss Mildred Carroll, Miss Marie La Gieg, Miss Rose Brown, Mr. Jas. E. Sullivan, Mr. Oscar Hall, Mr. H. Stewart Putnam, Mr. Bernard Allen, Mr. Thos. Clifford, Master Mason, and many others are in the cast.

The original scenery, by Fred Dangerfield; costumes by Mme Fisher, of London, England, and new and original music make the play much brighter and better than last season. "Off the Earth" is unquestionably the most successful of all the productions in which Mr. Eddie Foy has ever appeared.

Divorced Couple Remarry.

Bardwell, Dec. 28.—Robert Snook and Mrs. Mary Snook were married at the Christian church last night before an immense crowd. Mr. and Mrs. Snook were first married about twenty years ago, and a sor, and daughter, who are nearly grown, blessed their union.

About nine years ago Mr. Snook went away. A divorce was obtained by Mrs. Snook, but when Mr. Snook came back last October a reconciliation followed.

The son and daughter served as attendants last night.

The January number of Scribner's Magazine marks the beginning of its second decade with an entirely new dress of type. From the very first issue Scribner's has been an accepted leader in modern magazine literature and art.

The plans for 1897, as already announced, are the most extensive and attractive ever prepared for this magazine. While always choosing the best, independent of nationality, it is to be noted that, for the coming year, the leading features of Scribner's will be American.

Both of the serial stories are by American authors—Richard Harding Davis and W. D. Howells.
